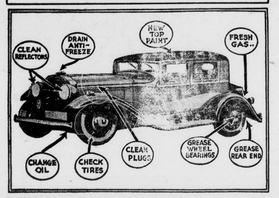
Prepare Now for Driving Season



BEFORE setting out on any trips during the summer driving season every motorist owes it to himself to go over his car carefully. Check the tires for wear. Inflate them properly. Drain the radiator. Clean the cooling system. Apply a coat of top dressing to the roof. Shine and polish the head-light reflectors. Clean the spark plugs. Drain the stale gas and use fresh gas, as gasoline often loses much of its volatility and anti-knock quality if left long in storage. If the valves need grinding have this done. Also be sure to have the car thoroughly lubricated and put in new grease in the rear end and the transmission. These simple tasks, done now, will pay dividends in added riding comfort and trouble-free operation of your car during the driving season just ahead.
